THE AMERICAN SOCIETY FOR REPRODUCTIVE MEDICINE
ENVIRONMENT AND REPRODUCTION SPECIAL INTEREST GROUP (ERSIG)
BYLAWS

ARTICLE ONE PURPOSE

The American Society for Reproductive Medicine (ASRM) is devoted to the growth of knowledge and professional education in the specialty of infertility and reproductive endocrinology throughout the reproductive life span. An increasing volume of evidence implicates the role of the environment on adverse human reproductive outcomes such as: infertility, pregnancy loss, declining sperm quality, and developmental effects in the male reproductive tract. Understanding of the relationship between exposure to environmental factors including contaminants and adverse human health effects continues to evolve, but significant uncertainties and knowledge gaps remain.

Thus there is a need for objective assessment of the expanding literature in the area and formation of evidence-based guidelines. Members who are interested in promoting educational and research endeavors relating to the role of environment in reproductive health and compromise have established this organization as a special interest group within ASRM. The principal purposes of the ASRM ERSIG shall be to encourage, facilitate and promote education, research, and knowledge transfer in the field of environmental influences on human reproduction. THE ERSIG seeks to offer a platform from which expert panels can be formed to review controversial topics and relevant opinions may be disseminated to other ASRM members, other professionals, and if deemed appropriate by the ASRM leadership and the public.

MISSION STATEMENT: The ERSIG seeks to enhance understanding of the effect of environmental factors on reproductive health through excellence in education, research and clinical practice.
